A Salad of Information and Fun
for Those Who May Like It.

The Nansen expedition has been fruitful of incidents of unusual interest. One of the most striking, perhaps, is that told by a member of the party recently about the effect that their isolation had upon them: So tired did they become of seeing the same faces and hearing the same voices day after day in the course of the slow drift northward that in the end a feeling of irritation was produced. At times this irritability became almost insupportable. Finding it almost impossible to endure the sight of one another they would set off on long walks over the ice, each man by himself. It was an astounding thing, one man said, to see his comrades striding away over the ice from the ship, each in a different direction and carefully avoiding his fellows. Perpetual darkness and constant daylight were equally oppressive, and "for fourteen months not a single living thing was seen, not even a sea-bird or a Polar bear." What all that must mean those only who have experienced it can know. It recalls the awful solitude of Coleridge's Ancient Mariner—"So lonely 'twas that God Himself scarce seemed there to be."

Superstition in India.

A curious example of native superstition cropped up during the trial of a case in the Calcutta High Court. A witness was asked why he had left Patna on a certain day in the week. His answer was that was one of the days in the week on which it was lucky to travel westward. On being pressed he stated that Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays were the days on which his astrologer or family priest permitted him to travel westward, and Monday, Wednesdays and Fridays eastwards; Sunday was the day on which travelling south was preferred. When matters of emergency were concerned, this rule was permitted to be broken; but sundry precautions had to be taken when this was done.

A Dog's Capacious Maw.

A dog who has eaten up a farm and a set of buildings has been found in Eastern Maine. This dog killed a neighbor's sheep. The neighbor offered to call it square if the dog was killed. The dog's master refused to agree to this, and a lawsuit came next. To pay the costs and damages assessed by the Court the owner of the dog had to mortgage his farm for $100. The mortgage had a bigger appetite than the dog, and soon his farm was gone and the owner had to move away. The dog is dead.

An Archaeological Discovery.

A discovery of the greatest interest to archaeologists has been made in the neighborhood of Cardiff. Lord Bute, who has been staying at Cardiff Castle for some time, has been pursuing antiquarian researches. Part of the castle grounds have been dug up, bringing to light the foundation of an old priory called "White Friars," known to have existed some centuries ago. The foundations of the church are perfect. Further excavations are being made.

Millais' Last Picture.

A trading company has offered £3500 for an unfinished picture of Millais—one that was on the easel at the time of his death. The picture would, no doubt, be of immense value for advertising purposes, but it is understood that Sir John Millais' family have declined to sell it. This is a big price for an unfinished painting, and it is doubtful whether it would have fetched half as much in an auction room, unless it were wanted for advertising purposes.
